DECAMERON acknowledges Gallery Director David Cohen as he stands down from his position this September. The exhibition's title alludes to Giovanni Boccaccio's masterpiece both because it celebrates a full decade of curatorial engagement and because of the striking range of genre, mood, and character of the artists it brings together. Over sixty artists are represented in the exhibition which includes paintings, sculptures, drawings, video interviews and electronic displays of installation shots, and an audio guide by Cohen.

The gallery is open seven days, from 10 am to 10 pm, with free admission.
