The New York Studio School presents Likkle Tings, an exhibition curated by Curtis Talwst Santiago, on view December 9, 2021 – January 23, 2022. Likkle Tings looks at contemporary artists engaged with small-scale works as a major and serious aspect of their practice. The exhibition title is derived from the Caribbean slang for Little Things. Including works by Lyndon J Barrois, Sr, Emma Bonnemaïson, Susan Cianciolo, Christina Kenton, Maria Koubourli, Christian Quin Newell, Jill Orlov, Patrice Robinson, Anthony Santiago, Curtis Talwst Santiago and Alexander Richard Wilson.

Curator Curtis Talwst Santiago writes “For most of our existence, humans have made tiny charms and talismans to bring luck, health, to keep the gods or those we cherish close. They have travelled with us, lived close to our bodies, and hidden from view when necessary. They have encouraged knowledge transmission, blessing, and intimacy.

The artists in this exhibition transform materials into palm-sized monuments. A mix of emerging and established artists, Likkle Tings has no insiders or outsiders. They are unified in their exploration of small-scale art as a channel and challenge. Lean in close, crouch, kneel, zoom in on your phone, reorient yourself, and embrace the quiet intimacy of close looking.

I would like to thank each artist for trusting me, as well as a heartfelt thank you to Graham Nickson and the New York Studio School for all of the support in putting together this exhibition.”
